The marching-on-in-degree (MOD) method is applied in this paper to analyze the transient electromagnetic scattering of multilayer graphene and a dielectric substrate. The time domain resistive boundary condition (TD-RBC) integral equation and time domain Poggio-Miller-Chang-Harrington-Wu (PMCHW) integral equation of electric and magnetic currents are employed to model graphene and the ...

In this paper, we present an electromagnetic analysis for three-dimensional arbitrarily shaped large structures illuminated by a short pulse. The time domain electric field integral equation (EFIE) formulation is used to obtain the early time data with a central differencing scheme to evaluate the time derivatives of the potential functions.
